TONITE, I DRUM!

I can already feel the heartbeat,
 Pounding in my depths.
 Low and dull, yet ever it builds.
 The anticipation quickens my soul.

Tonite, I travel.
 Tonite, I merge with the One.
 Tonite, I drum!

Blessed Be!

From the Chair...

Welcoming CUUPS, Inc.

It has a funny feeling, but CUUPS, Inc (CI) has bought all the members of CUUPS the unincorporated association (Cua). Of course, there is only the right to call ourselves members, so let me tell you how this all works.

Incorporation of Cua could not be accomplished according to three lawyers consulted by the Cua Board. So we created an all new organization, gave it the same name, and CI bought all the assets of Cua by way of an agreement crafted by the Cua Board at a meeting in Texas in February. With incorporation seal in hand Patrick Sileo filed a 501(c)(3) with the IRS so that we would have non-profit status. What that means is that a portion of your membership dues or any other donations can be tax-exempt.

The Cua Board chose to do the incorporating in Ohio for a number of complex reasons, the most important being confidentiality. Ohio's laws are a bit different concerning the list of member names.

There was another stone in our path: Cua Bylaws are rather sketchy. Let me try to show how this works. The activities of an incorporated organization are controlled by the Bylaws, or as Ohio calls them, the Regulations. If there is something that is not covered by the Regulations, the Articles of Association take precedence, and should the AoA not speak of the issue, the issue is controlled by Ohio State Law. In the case of the Cua Bylaws, the Articles could not dam the holes, so our actions would have been controlled by State Law.

So we wrote new regulations, with legal counsel, and tried to leave a lot of things for the board to handle with policy. We made no attempt to alter what we considered the intent of the old bylaws; we wanted to be in line with Ohio and the IRS, and the Principles of the UUA. We danced!

I want to give special thanks to Patrick Sileo who did so much of the background work, I want to thank Alana Hommel for assembling all the material needed for the 501(c)(3), and I want to thank all the Board Members of Cua for their patience and compassion throughout this undertaking.

From the Secretary...

Despite having changed addresses twice in the past year, despite not having outside advertising for almost a year, despite (until very recently) not having any pamphlets in print to distribute, CUUPS continues to grow. Last August we had 859 members - now (at the end of March) we have 908, of which 667 are voting members and 241 are associates. There are also 208 non-member subscribers to the CUUPS Newsletter.

For people coming to GA, (and everyone else - should the Annual Meeting put any questions to a postal ballot) the 30-day cutoff for voting eligibility at the Annual Meeting is May 22.

We are about to produce the 1997 CUUPS Webworking Directory. Last year's had about 225 people in it - this year's will have around 300. If you are a Conf.=3 person and you don't want to be listed in it - let me know. If you are not a Conf.=3 person and you do want to be in there - let me know. (Phone number listed below)

Speaking of networking, our sister organization in England, the Unitarian Pagan Network puts out a fascinating quarterly newsletter called The New Age Unitarian. Copies of this publication will be available for purchase at the CUUPS Display table at GA - and in our next issue, we tell you how you can subscribe to it.

A new phone-mail system has recently been installed which contains brief summaries of who we are, what CUUPS major events are this year.

We're still experimenting with what information to put on there - so check it out and let us know what you think of it. The number is: 817-557-3949.

From the Communications Director...

The new address appears on the label portion of this newsletter so please note it in your personal address files. Thanks to those of you starting to send in submissions for the newsletter. If you do not see something in this issue that you sent, keep watching. It may be in the file for upcoming issues.

The Newsletter Team is accepting submissions for the August edition of the newsletter. Articles we are particularly interested in for this issue are on anti-defamation efforts in the Pagan and UU Pagan community, and fall equinox.

The idea of anti-defamation and discrimination issues among Pagan identified UU's is becoming quite a problem across the country - from child custody cases to simple rights to practice one's own spiritual beliefs. As a community of UU's, how can we support one another in these matters? Is there interest in creating a team to network and offer support to folks needing to know their organization is there behind them? How do congregations support us? Or how do they fall short? All of these questions and thoughts are open for discussion and articles.

The new brochures have been sent to the printers finally. New forms for CUUPS membership and such can be found later in this issue of the newsletter.

The Website Team has been cooking! We have the beginnings of the site in place and are applying for domain names. Special thanks to John Pierce and Christian Day for their teamwork and Susan Shaw and David Burwasser for writing the text with me.

Susan Shaw is creating a team to create accessibility to our published materials. Currently, she and her team are looking at what it will take to have our promotional literature and newsletters available on cassette tapes. If you are a member, or know someone could use this service, please mail a letter to the CUUPS office addressed to the Publications Committee. If you have any other accessibility issues regarding our literature please let us know.

We are looking for someone with graphic design and production skills working in Quark Express, Illustrator and Photoshop to join our team. Anyone interested please contact me. We are also looking for submissions from teens and children for the newsletter in an effort to include all levels of thought regarding our Pagan and Earth-centered ways. Games, puzzles, stories, etc are welcomed. If you are interested in volunteering with the publications and communications of the newsletter please let me know.

From the Religious Education Committee....

The ad hoc Religious Education Committee started internet discussions last fall with a great deal of enthusiasm. Many wonderful ideas for both adult and children's curricula were generated. Unfortunately, we found that all of the members of the RE Committee were already very busy people and no one has yet had the time to turn any of these great ideas into a viable curriculum proposal. The Committee hopes that more time will be freed up this summer to work on some of these ideas.

At the same time, members of the Committee have shared with the chair, Joan Van Becelaere, a number of short articles that they have used as discussion starters in mixed UU groups. It was felt that some of the articles might help new CUUPS groups with their initial task of educating the members of their churches about earth-centered spirituality. So far, six new groups have looked at the collection of articles and given some feedback on which ones are worthwhile and which ones aren't. It is hoped that with the addition of a few more articles and some connecting narrative, this "starter packet" might be formalized and made more widely available at minimal cost.

A couple of members of the RE Committee have written a proposal for funding from the UUA to develop a new earth-centered, intergenerational curriculum. The chair of the RE Committee is assisting in this enterprise and acting as a CUUPS contact. Things are very tentative at this time, as would be expected. But if the project is funded, there will certainly be more information to follow. Keep hope alive.

From the GA Display Committee....

March finds activity for the GA Display Committee starting to ramp up.

This past year has brought to press several books that we hope to display at General Assembly. As in past years, there will be T-shirts and a small amount of jewelry. We are also attempting to focus more on academically oriented books on Paganism, and material that is produced by CUUPS - such as pamphlets and newsletters. If you have an item that you would like to see at the CUUPS booth at GA please send a message to the CUUPS Office.

David Pollard

From the Ethics Committee....

We have been reviewing the ethics statements of many other organizations. Margot Adler has reviewed the ethics statements of many Pagan organizations, including COG and CAW. At least one member of COG warned us that extremely structured ethics statements and procedures can cause more problems than solutions. COG ended up scrapping many of its ethics procedures after they resulted in complex infighting.

Margot Adler
CUUPS Ethics Review Committee

From the Membership Committee....

This past August a membership committee was formed to consider changes of how membership and chapters are handled within the organization. The first concrete results of this committee are the revised membership /subscription form in this newsletter. It consolidates the many "levels" of membership and eliminates the "sliding membership fee" that many felt to be confusing - however the Student/Low Income Membership rate was kept for those who can not afford the standard CUUPS membership fee.

Our work is not yet done. There are several issues that we did not reach consensus on - and would like further feedback. Some of these issues are:

Would a Lifetime Membership be something people would be interested in? What would an appropriate fee for this be?

Some chapters feel CUUPS should not charge an annual chapter registration fee - while other chapters voluntarily pay far over the required amount. Is the current $30/yr a happy medium? What (if any) criteria would be sufficient to waive a chapter's fee for a year? Should the Chapter Update be revived, and if so - who pays for it?

Please send you feedback on these questions to either Stacey Greenstein or to the CUUPS Office.

ditions that have come together to form modern Unitarian Universalism.

From the Bylaws Review Committee....

In 1995 the CUUPS Board chartered a Bylaws Review Committee.

Last year, our committee proposed Bylaws amendments which CUUPS members adopted at the Annual Meeting in Indianapolis. This was a first step, but it did not bring the Bylaws up to the standard of completeness we need, with all the democratic safeguards we want.

Also at the 1996 Annual Meeting, the members authorized the Board to incorporate CUUPS and secure formal nonprofit tax exemption.

This effort is largely complete. The process of forming the corporation has given us Regulations (bylaws) that meet a high standard of legal completeness. The Bylaws Review Committee now has the support of many Board members to consider amendment or restatement of these Regulations to align them closely with our UU intention to affirm and promote the use of the democratic process.

We hope to have proposed changes ready for consideration at the 1997 Annual Meeting in Phoenix.

SHARED LEADERSHIP IN PRACTICE

BY SUSAN M. SHAW

When I said "yes" to becoming the Chair of the Susan B. Anthony Transcendentalists (SBAT) chapter of CUUPS I felt unprepared for leadership. My biggest thought was "I don't have the skills to be a leader." I was right, and wrong. In SBAT, leadership is a shared responsibility. So even though I don't have all of the skills a leader needs, with a shared leadership model I don't have to carry all of the leadership responsibilities alone.

A shared leadership style means that we strive to allow the leadership to flow from person to person as their skills and interests direct. This practice allows everyone a chance to work for the good of the group. Each time someone takes on a responsibility, from publishing the newsletter to agreeing to write the Quarter Callings for a ritual, the whole group benefits. This shared leadership style is modeled after our Church Council's standard operating procedures.

SBAT maintains some practical bureaucratic positions within our church: the position of Chair and the signatories for our financial (holding) account. These positions are filled for one year terms, by church members, to maintain a continuity with the church and within the group. Other types of leadership, such as leading a book discussion, planning and leading a ritual, even planning the schedule of events, can move from person to person. As long as the bureaucrats are informed, the day to day leadership in our group is up to the individual members.

One of the roles of any leader is to act as a protector. This can be a conflicting role when a group needs to be open and welcoming. Instead of being able to erect obvious barriers to prevent some problems, like a closed coven could do, SBAT has to deal with problems after they've arrived. This creates some special difficulties for whoever is in the seat of leadership. This also creates special responsibilities for everyone in a group using shared leadership. For example, as the Chair of SBAT I am not authorized to simply act on any protective instincts I may have without a group consensus. Instead, each person attending is responsible for protecting the group and working for group consensus in matters of importance. No person should act alone, but everyone is responsible for taking action if they see a problem. A key to this working well is that we have to talk honestly with each other.

When shared leadership works well, my own lack of skill for dealing with a problem can be offset by the skills of others. As a figurehead, in addition to being a paper pusher, I can take action that the group directs me to take on behalf of SBAT. In a very healthy way, the leadership can shift from the person who signs the room requests, to the people who have insights and skills on a particular topic, back to the figurehead for resolution.

Living in community with each other isn't a simple task. The Wiccan phrase of "Perfect Love and Perfect Trust" is an ideal to strive for, but hopefully not the measure we use to find imperfections in people unbearable, unlovable, or unresolvable. Our group works very hard to honor the principle of the inherent worth and dignity of every person.

Shared leadership is just one tool a group can use to encourage the growth of healthy leadership and authority within a group. Our chapter finds it a good way to prevent some, though not all, of the dogmatic behavior that can creep into Pagan groups. Reminding ourselves of the principle of a free and responsible search for truth is another tool we rely on to prevent dogmatism from overtaking us.

We also find shared leadership useful, though not entirely successful, in having people stick around to resolve problems that occur. It is common in groups to see differences resolved by people leaving. When shared leadership works well, people feel their input matters and their skills are honored. They are willing to stick around through the tough times, knowing fun times will return.

One of the skills I'm learning during my term as Chair of SBAT is how to facilitate shared leadership. I am fortunate to be working with a group of people committed to the practice of shared leadership, even when we don't often name what it is we are doing. I feel confident that, when I step down as Chair, I will be a better group member for having had this experience.

For anyone hesitating to take on a leadership role, I encourage you to consider shared leadership as a possible model to use with your group. It can remove some of the inevitable fear and open new possibilities to make the experience a good one for everyone involved. ■

EARTHMAN

DIANIC MEN

There is a large segment of the Pagan community that is exclusively, or nearly exclusively, Goddess oriented in its theology. Dianic Paganism and Women's Spirituality are, unsurprisingly, associated with a 100% female worship contingent. But there are Goddess-oriented men in the larger Pagan circle, too. This columnist was one such for the early years of his Pagan journey. He made contact recently with Jason, a Pagan man devoted to Isis, over the Internet. This is an edited compression of several weeks' conversation.

Jason: Brought up in the Methodist Church, I went from "trying to believe in God" -- to several years of atheism, eventually mellowing into agnosticism -- to dabbling in Eastern religions including consulting the Yi Qing -- to dabbling in paganism (European), to becoming a practicing pagan -- to becoming a devotee of Isis. I prefer the term "Thean" (from Greek "thea", "goddess") instead of the unwieldy phrase "goddess worshipper".

EarthMan: When I was a Goddess-only male Pagan I called myself a "theological feminist." Still do, in fact.

Jason: My conversion experience was a manifestation of the Goddess in December 1994, in which I was given spiritual healing and because of which I dedicated my life to Her. It may not be what happened to other people; in fact, some people might not understand it at all; but it is what happened to me.

EarthMan: I got a specific, ritual narrative rather than a healing, but this sounds "very" familiar.

Jason: I would be interested in a more details about this.

EarthMan: I had gone for some 20 summers to the Institute on Religion in an Age of Science on Star Island, where I gradually developed a love of nature, and heard research papers to the effect that religiosity and mystical experiences are products of the healthy brain, not pathologies or arrested development. I had taken "Cakes for the Queen of Heaven" the previous fall. Gave me a lot to think about a way to be theological without buying into any of the stuff that had repelled me from theology for 25-30 years.

May, 1987: I was visiting family in San Francisco. Until they could find time, they had to turn me loose with a map and bus pass. So I went to Haight-Ashbury, bought a 20th anniversary promo photo book about the heyday of the Counterculture, wandered into Golden Gate Park and began to look for sites that matched the photos in the book.

Between one footstep and the next, a thought I had shelved for future examination months earlier, rose up in my mind and exploded. A *complete* Goddess-imaged narrative that I had never heard before, about religion and science, and very specific to Star Island, blew into my head in about a quarter of a second. This is a narrative that takes about five minutes to relate verbally. I was in total overload; I wept, staggered, grabbed a tree to keep from falling down, and realized why full-time prophets have no social life. After regaining my equilibrium I thought, well, at least it is clear that this is the theology to which I am emotionally adapted!

Jason: Same here. I was dabbling in magick, trying to make up little prayers, obsessively reading about ancient times, building an altar (ridiculously small, by my current standards), doing little "spells", trying to "have dreams".. It is as if Thea one day said to Herself, "That @#%$* guy!! He's been trying to call me up every damn day, he's been hanging around my door..." then one day She just flung the door open without warning, grabbed me by the ankle and without any explanation dragged me straight into the spirit world. I was in the middle of yet another little meditation-spell at the time, a healing spell directed at Isis, so of course She appeared in that form.

So, you had a Goddess-only phase too! Must be what I am in the middle of, right now. How long did it last for you?

EarthMan: About five years, give or take.

Jason: How did you "get out of" it -- was it a single event, or more of an evolutionary gradual change?

EarthMan: Yes. A CUUPS officer nudged me to a book about the Green Man, which I found fascinating as iconography but for the moment nothing more.

The single event was a male-bashing episode at my old congregation, a speaker so hostile I was able to organize a rebuttal service without difficulty. In mid-prep a voice speaking out of an empty room asked me: "David, is this part of your new religious orientation, or just your old secular politics?" To which I promptly responded, "No; the male is sacred, too!"

Oops.

Jason: Do you regret your Goddess-only phase at all in any way?

EarthMan: It was an essential bridge from Humanist non-theism to a theological orientation, because the objections I had to the god of Scripture all boiled down to patriarchy, none of which was obvious until I took the "Cakes" course.

Theological feminism was a way of making sure I picked up no taint of that from traditions. After being into Paganism for a while I had developed a shamanic approach -- pulling stuff out of my own psychic innards and stealing any good liturgical element that couldn't run away fast enough -- I developed the self confidence to expand my pantheon.

Jason: Do you think it gave you insights, or had negative effects, etc?

EarthMan: Definitely insights. I quit worrying about whether I could call myself a feminist when many feminist women I knew were blase about feminist elements I found deeply objectionable as a man. Could a man create his own feminism? Maybe not a Humanist man, but a Goddess-oriented man, who had found and begun to make peace with his inner woman, could and did.

And I spent quite a few seasons in the female-oriented head-space that is clearly needed as a cleansing agent for millennia of patriarchy, but also has toxic effects from excess dosages, kind of like belladonna.

Jason: It's impossible to explain the Thean position to non-Pagans, and nearly impossible to explain to some Pagans. Oddly, some think that a male goddess worshipper must necessarily be gay, deluded, insincere, or...insert your favorite adjectival reason for rejecting a person.

EarthMan: The Christians have a saying: Being a Christian doesn't mean you're perfect, just forgiven. Well, being a Pagan just says what path you are on, not how far you have to go!

Goddess-oriented UU Pagan men are invited to share their insights and theological adventures with EarthMan, who is always on the lookout for potential guest columns. ■

PROTECTING THE INNOCENT -- FROM US!

DAVID R. BURWASSER

Any Pagan who is a parent and on the Internet, or whose public school or library is on the 'Net, should be aware that supposedly benign smut-blocking software is blocking access to completely harmless Pagan web sites -- and not just in the home, either.

Parental concerns over pornography and violence over the 'Net has evoked some software products designed to prevent access to such material from web sites (locations on the 'Net maintained by individuals or organizations). They go by such names as CyberPatrol, CyberSitter and NetNanny. There are three problems with such software packages.

- There are hundreds of sites out there. A parent would be hard pressed to find the time to research them individually, which is why these products are real services. But it is difficult to devise an alternative if the service is inadequate.
- The providers are not limiting themselves to smut, gore and grossness. One of the categories blocked on most products is "Satanic" or "cult" sites -- this got a big publicity boost after the Rancho Santa Fe suicides last March -- and the blocking is grossly overextensive. Many Pagan sites are being blocked by some of the technically-best products. Other categories are sex education and contraceptive information.
- These packages are not being implemented only in the home. Under political pressure, public libraries and public schools are considering installation of this software in terminals used by the public. This would mean reducing the available sites on a publicly funded terminal to what would be appropriate for a six-year-old in the opinion of cultural conservatives.

HOW IT WORKS

The ban mechanism is wide open to act as a prejudice amplifier. Scores of people are hired to surf the 'Net all day and pick out sites that qualify for banning. The kind of people who take this work are going to include a lot of folks who are enthusiastic to restrain information, and the total flow of ban recommendations is going to be tainted with the shared prejudices of that cohort.

The next step is a company review of recommendations. Here the ignorance of the people doing the review is a key factor. If they don't know the difference between Paganism and devil worship, they are going to be no barrier to the orchestrated prejudices of the recommenders. Likewise, if they do not know the difference between a site that counsels teenagers about their sexuality and one that tries to exploit young people sexually, they are going to be helpless before the homophobia of the recommenders.

Different companies have different corporate policies. The providers of CyberSitter market it through Focus on the Family and have a "family values" concept that leads them to bar all feminist sites without being interested in what feminists have to say in rebuttal.

By contrast, CyberPatrol has a review board that includes representatives from NOW, NAACP, Morality in the Media, PTO and the teachers' union. However, the number of unjustifiably banned sites on their CyberNOT list creates a real question as to how well their review process works. One problem is that site owners are not informed of a ban; they must find out from a third party, and then must find out the existence of the appeal process and how to set it in motion.

CyberPatrol indicated, at the time this story was filed, a willingness to include a Pagan representative on this review board. The on-line Pagan community is sharply divided over how to respond to this offer -- again, as of press time.

PUBLIC JURISDICTIONS

Another severe problem is raised when a public library or school district adopts software like this.

Generally, libraries have always taken the stand that they decide what is available on their shelves on some objective basis, and do not allow pressure groups who purport to speak on behalf of the community to change that. Turning over to a private corporation, the choice of what is to be available on line in the library, violates that principle.

Specifically, filtration categories like CyberPatrol's "Satanic/Cult" list do not belong anywhere in a tax-supported government institution open to the public. No government at any level is permitted to make value judgements between religions, and they may not hire a private contractor to do so. The Boston public libraries are about to install CyberPatrol in the children's room terminals; the online Pagan civil liberties community is talking about an injunction to keep at least the "Satanic/Cult" category out of that installation.

Pagan citizens might keep an eye out for proposals to install filtration software in their local library or school computer lab. This could be another Radical Religious Right "stealth candidate" -- digital rather than flesh and blood, and possibly harder to remove from office once inaugurated.

AT YOUR SERVICE

Many Internet service providers are offering, or are preparing to offer, filtration software as a service to subscribers. This is not entirely a bad thing in itself, because the presence of such services reduces the child protection argument for government censorship of the Internet.

Again, CyberPatrol is a heavily favored product. Evidently it has technical and user-friendliness advantages. (That is based on an unscientific sampling of opinions, not an ad!) Pagan parents should be very careful about selecting a filtration service. Some points to check:

- Is there a Satanic/Cult or similar religious category?
- Must you take the whole package, or can you choose subsets and avoid mere reflections of conservative prejudice?
- How easy is it to discontinue the service? There are reports that this has been made technically daunting to keep computer-clever kids from disabling it. (There are also reports that computer-clever kids walk all over these products.)
- Is there an easy route for feedback to the provider about a banned site that you think should not be blocked? (Remember, the software keeps you from informing the site owner of the ban!)
- Does the product match your wishes as to how much information you want available to your children about feminism, sexuality, contraception, STDs and other "family values" hot buttons?

THE SOCIAL CONTRACT

In this decade the Radical Religious Right has tried a number end-runs around the North American social contract of tolerance and secular regulation. Based on an imperfect on-line window into the process, and some admitted preconceptions, it is this author's impression that the companies providing filtration software have unwittingly set themselves up to be the tools of another such attempt. Because those companies share the general public's ignorance of new religious movements, in this case it is Pagans who are on the front lines of resistance. We are called to defend a society that does not fully value its own best features, or the extent to which they are under attack. ■

His recording of twenty-two rounds and chants spins a web of multi-cultural spiritual traditions destined to ensnare and engage the listener for many hours of delight. His deep, melodious voice wraps around the listener, creating a transformation from listener to participant. You can't help but sing along, tap your toes, and smile in recognition as the music sweeps you along.

This recording is a blend of traditional songs as well as original compositions. Khryso brings pleasure along with a spirit of discovery through songs from such diverse cultures as Icelandic, Germanic, Xhosa of South Africa, Navajo of North America, Jewish, Hebridean and English of the United Kingdom, African-American and many more. ## G.A. RESOLUTION TARGETS VIOLATIONS OF PAGAN RELIGIOUS CIVIL LIBERTIES

DAVE BURWASSER

The proposed Study/Action Issue (resolution) on "Building Religious Tolerance Through Interfaith Cooperation" has been circulating around the UUA in hopes of building congregational and district support.

Among the religious rights violations listed in the resolution text, to justify the actions proposed, is (line 302):

"Members of new religious movements confront human rights violations."

This would be the first time the Unitarian Universalist Association (or, as far as this writer knows, any mainstream denomination) has stepped up to the plate in defense of Earth Religion religious rights. The civil liberties situation for Pagans and other Earth Religion faith communities has seen a steady increase in reported incidents -- whether due to more incidents or better reporting, is not clear.

New rules of the UUA permit adoption of only one Study/Action Issue per year, so this must garner a wide spectrum of support for religious freedom issues if it is to have a chance at all.

The campaign for this measure has been carried forward by Rev. Robert Murphy of the Unitarian Coastal Fellowship (UUA) of Morehead City, NC. Rev. Murphy may be contacted at the Unitarian Coastal Fellowship, 1300 Evans Street, Morehead City NC 28857; 919+808-3847. ■

RAPTURE

Come away
With me
To the real world.

To the wind
Sighing for love
Of the red-tailed hawk.

To the tall fir
Reaching unrequited
For a luminous moon.
To the marsh grasses
Softly rippling
To the ocean's pulse.

Come with me
To the forests' heart
Where the green tapestry
Starred with jewelled birds
And fragrant flowers
Enters the blood
And calls you home.

And come with me
To the black pond's night
To the pulsing voice
Of a thousand silk frogs
Singing the latticework skyward.

And stay with me
When high summer
Enfolds the Earth
In passion's heat
When the earthblood runs
swift and urgent
And life is the message,
The meaning
And all that has ever mattered
Or will ever matter.

AN EXPERIENCE OF THE DIVINE

ROBIN EDGAR, VERDUN, QUEBEC, CANADA

Sunday, March 9th, 1997

Dear Fellow Unitarian Universalists,

On this day, when the Earth's sun and only moon come to their glorious conjunction in the skies over Mongolia and Siberia during a total solar eclipse, I wish to formally reaffirm my claim of a genuine revelatory experience God, one which I believe should be clearly understood to be of considerable significance to humanity. I reaffirm this claim of a genuinely significant revelation of God both as a member of the Unitarian Church of Montreal and as a member of the greater Unitarian Universalist religious community.

What I am claiming as the direct result of my profound revelatory experience of God is that it is not the result of mere chance or "coincidence" that the Earth's sun and only moon have virtually identical apparent sizes when viewed from the surface of our planet but that this scientific fact is the product of "divine design". It is a readily verifiable fact of astronomy that, due to a reciprocal relationship between the value of the ratio of the diameter of our sun to that of our moon and the ratio of their respective distances from the Earth, our sun and moon appear to have the same size. The odds against such a remarkably precise similarity in apparent size occurring by "coincidence" are, if you will pardon my use of the expression, astronomically high. Long before Albert Einstein said, "God does not play dice with the cosmos," the eminent Unitarian Transcendentalist Ralph Waldo Emerson is known to have stated that, "The dice of God are always loaded." I tend to agree with Emerson.

As if this fact alone was not evidence enough of intelligent design in Creation it is an equally verifiable fact that the total solar eclipse, the awe-inspiring celestial phenomenon which occurs only as a direct result of the previously stated similarity in apparent sizes of our sun and moon, bears a genuinely striking similarity in appearance to a "radiant divine eye" in the sky. The black lunar orb forms its pupil while the rays of the sun's corona surrounding the darkened moon resemble the iris. The odds against this uncanny resemblance between a human eye and our totally eclipsed sun occurring simply by mere chance "coincidence" are so extremely high that they are almost certainly beyond human ability to calculate. Everything in my revelatory experience of God indicates to me that this mystical cosmic symbolism which is perceivable during a total solar eclipse is no "coincidence" either but is equally the product of "divine design". The total solar eclipse forms a celestial allegory which represents the proverbial "All-Seeing Eye of God". It is a "sign in the heavens" signifying our Creator's omniscience.

I am claiming a genuinely prophetic religious experience, a valid, valuable, and, in many ways, readily verifiable revelation of God which affirms both the existence and the omniscience of a Creator. I should point out to you that even if my claims of a revelatory experience of God are denied or dismissed the fact remains that, regardless of how this came about, I have most certainly made a discovery of major significance which sheds considerable new light on how ancient religious beliefs and "mythology" were profoundly influenced by the unique and spectacular celestial phenomenon of the total solar eclipse. While the totally eclipsed sun's striking similarity in appearance to a "radiant divine eye" is, according to my religious experience, the most significant symbolic aspect of this celestial phenomenon there is additional profound religious symbolism clearly perceivable in this celestial phenomenon which I have very good reason to believe is worthy of humanity's attention.

I can present considerable evidence which proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that solar and lunar eclipses, and the total eclipse of the sun in particular, have had a tremendous influence on the religious consciousness of prehistoric and ancient humanity and that the various myths, mythological beings, religious beliefs, symbols, and religious iconography that were evidently inspired by solar and lunar eclipses still play a role in contemporary society. Ancient humanity's perception of the awe-inspiring celestial phenomenon of the total solar eclipse is the key to understanding an exceptional number of ancient religious beliefs or so-called "myths".

Perhaps the most familiar mythological creature that was clearly inspired by eclipses, both solar and lunar, is the winged cosmic serpent or dragon. Most planetariums now inform the public of this scientifically provable fact. The proverbial phoenix, is another very well-known mythological creature which can also be shown to have been directly inspired by total solar eclipses although very few people are presently aware of this. There is considerable evidence which clearly indicates that this mythical sunbird, which dies and then is reborn from its own "ashes", was initially inspired by the bird-like form which is clearly visible within the sun's corona during numerous total solar eclipses. After all does not the Earth's sun figuratively "die" during totality only to be "reborn" when it reemerges from behind the black disc of the moon? Our ancient ancestors perceived this symbolism of resurrection in the total solar eclipse and, in all probability, this contributed to the widespread belief in an afterlife. Rayed sun-discs are found at the burial sites of many ancient cultures. If the Sun-god could "die" only to be "reborn" might not humans have this ability also?

The concept of the All-Seeing Eye of God is integral to virtually every theistic religious tradition from prehistoric times right up to the present. The symbol of the All-Seeing Eye of God enclosed within a triangle was incorporated into the reverse side of the Great Seal of the United States, although it was diplomatically referred to as the Eye of Providence. This is perhaps one of the most familiar examples of this ubiquitous religious symbol since it is printed on the back of the one-dollar bills of the United States of America. Coincidentally, there is a significant Unitarian connection involved in this use of the All-Seeing Eye symbol since the congressional committee that was formed to oversee the design of the Great Seal of the United States of America was initially comprised of Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, and John Adams, all three are known to have been Unitarian sympathizers and one, John Adams, was actually a member of the Unitarian church.

My profound religious experience has made it absolutely clear to me that the Creator of the Universe is very much alive and well and is fully conscious of human thoughts, words, and actions. Divine omniscience, the total awareness of everything that transpires in the Creation, is a fundamental attribute of the Creator, one that has been repeatedly affirmed by many prophets and mystics as well as the inspired scriptures of the vast majority of the world's various religious traditions. Theists, those people who believe in a supremely intelligent Creator of the Universe, are quite simply not in a position to believe that the well established and readily verifiable scientific fact that the Earth's sun and only moon have virtually identical apparent sizes when viewed from our planet is nothing but the result of a "pure chance" coincidence. This truly remarkable reciprocal relationship between the Earth's sun and moon can only be recognized by theists as concrete physical evidence of supremely intelligent design in the Creation and thus of a Creator. Similarly it is perfectly logical and rational, at least from the point of view of theistic thinking, that the totally eclipsed sun's even more remarkable resemblance to a "radiant divine eye" simply cannot be considered by God believing people to be the result of a mere chance "coincidence" either. Those human beings who genuinely believe in an omniscient Creator of the Universe have little option but to accept that the Creator is not only perfectly aware of this meaningful "cosmic coincidence" but is directly responsible for this profoundly meaningful symbolic arrangement in the Creation.

I would like to believe that most Unitarian Universalist theists, along with God-believing people all around the world, might respond to this veritable, and eminently verifiable, revelation of God by showing God just how good they can be, by trying just a bit harder to follow the principles and ideals of their respective religious traditions, by practicing more what they preach, by taking steps to ensure that they genuinely endeavor to walk what they talk and, more generally, by trying to live out their lives in a manner that is in greater harmony with the both Creator and the Creation.

I would also like to believe that by significantly and permanently raising humanity's consciousness to both the existence and the omniscience of God that many human failings and social ills could be significantly and permanently reduced. How many human beings would physically or psychologically assault or abuse their fellow human beings if they clearly understood that God was totally aware of their actions and that they were ultimately answerable to God for their behaviour? How many human beings would engage in the systematic destruction of the Earth and its Creatures if they were aware that they did so under the watchful eye of the Creator?

The late James Luther Adams said, "I call that church free which responds in responsibility to the Spirit that bloweth where it listeth." As a member of a religious community whose ministers and lay people proclaim that "Revelation is not sealed!", openly purport to be members of a "prophetic" religious community, and covenant to affirm and promote a free and responsible search for truth and meaning in life I call upon you to respond in a genuinely responsible manner to what is probably one of the most credible and readily verifiable claims of a significant revelation of God ever made by any human being, to say nothing of a fellow Unitarian.

Members of our community, "accept the obligation to seek out truth for themselves and to follow that truth wherever it may lead." Indeed Rev. Emeritus Charles Eddis has written that, "We are firmly committed to truth with a small 't,' to the right - indeed the duty - of personal judgment. Freedom of belief is not a license for religious anarchy or irresponsibility. It is not a franchise for wishful thinking. It is an opportunity for careful, hard, honest thought." The final statement of the little red tract that is titled "What do Unitarian Universalists believe?" proclaims, "We believe in the importance of religious community. The validation of experience requires the confirmation of peers, who provide a critical platform along with a network of mutual support." These statements, and others too numerous to quote, lend support to my assertion that the Unitarian Universalist religious community has a responsibility, a duty, indeed an obligation, to take steps to document, critically examine, and even to "validate" my claim of a genuine revelation of God, particularly since if found to be valid it would evidently be a revelation of considerable significance.

As a Unitarian in the fullest sense of the word I genuinely believe in the unity of God; indeed, on the basis of my profound revelatory experience of God, I can honestly claim a true mystical experience, and thus actual experiential knowledge of God. I do not "believe" in God; I know, as a consequence of my experience, that God not only exists but has various qualities, attributes and capabilities, not the least of these being an awareness of human thoughts, words, and actions. I firmly believe that religious beliefs, especially claims of a prophecy or revelation of God, must be open to question and serious examination and that they are "subject to the scrutiny and the revision of reason and experience." I formally entreat you, and the Unitarian Universalist religious community as a whole, to take steps to genuinely "respond in responsibility to the Spirit" of my sincere, honest, and eminently verifiable claim of a genuine and significant revelation of God. I ask you to "respond in hope to the light that has shone and still shines in the darkness;" and to receive "as an angel from heaven" all of the various demonstrable truths that may be brought to light as a result of this revelation. ■
